

Lackmann Culinary Services' Sustainability Vision....

Sustainability as a Core Business Process

Sustainability can be defined as development that meets the needs of the present, without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.

Sustainability

- ◇ Is not a fad; it is a way of life
- ◇ Encompasses not just recycling, but includes local farming, sustainable food supplies, energy efficient equipment, product sourcing, education, community involvement and many more areas that we must address in the future.

Lackmann Culinary Services clearly understands the importance of a sustainable environment, and the idea of sustainability is important to us. That understanding must be woven through the inner fabric of our company in all that we do and with all our business partners.

As a result, the idea of a significant company effort is already underway and will continue to be a major corporate thrust in the upcoming 2009-2010 fiscal year and beyond. Additionally, we have put together a Sustainability Committee, reporting directly to the Executive Committee, which will form the policies and programs that will highlight our ongoing commitment to a sustainable environment. Additionally, we will provide access to our Sustainability initiative, both on the main page and within our company website, featured on Lackmann's Corporate Website.

As a Company, we have a responsibility for corporate social responsibility, and we must play a leadership role in putting the full force of our expertise, research and community outreach to do our part to solve the greatest challenge of our century.
